

restored house at Long Royd. Go over a stone stile and right into the access lane. Follow this track to Copley Lane. Turn right down the lane, leaving the Kirklees Way.

The impressive Copley House, to your left, was formerly occupied by the Childs family, textile manufacturers, and more recently was a farmhouse.

Shortly after Hardingley, and some 100m before the railway bridge, turn right over a stone stile onto a footpath which leads onto a track over the Penistone Line. The route now runs alongside the Kirklees Light Railway for a couple of miles from Shelley Station almost back to Skelmanthorpe.

The Light Railway follows the route of the former Clayton West branch line, which left the Penistone Line near Shepley Station and ran for just over 3 miles through Skelmanthorpe to Clayton West.

The first sod was cut in November, 1872 but the line did not open until 1st September, 1879. It closed on 22nd January, 1983.

Continue straight across Long Moor Lane and on as far as Shelley Woodhouse Lane. This is part of the Shelley Welly Walk.

Here turn right then almost immediately left onto a path alongside the grounds of Shelley College. Cross Huddersfield Road (B6116) straight ahead onto a path through woodland to follow the embankment-top of the railway cutting. Do not cross the footbridge over the railway. Instead bear left across the field to reach Strike Lane. Go straight across the lane onto a footpath which bears right and down to cross Baildon Dike. Continue right to emerge at a cluster of houses on Station Road at Park Gate.

In the 13th century the lord of the manor granted a right for a road to be built to mark the boundary at the west of Emley Park. A farm stood here at the park gate.

Turn left onto the road (care here!) and shortly cross the road and turn right onto the access track to Blacker Farm, the home of the Rockwood hounds. Before you reach the farm take the path on your right which leads down and across Park Gate Dike and into the edge of Blacker Wood.

Blacker Wood is ancient woodland, originally part of a larger wooded area known as Scissett Wood, and most likely used for timber rather than as a hunting park.

Follow the wood edge then bear right across the field path. Go under the railway and up the narrow path to meet Pilling Lane once again. Turn right and retrace your earlier footsteps along Elm Street, Queen Street and Commercial Road, back to the Council Offices.

Skelmanthorpe Circular Trail

Cumberworth Steppes

A 10-mile walk (easily split into two parts) introducing you to stretches of the Dearne Way, the Kirklees Way – and the Kirklees Light Railway. Stout footwear is advisable.

Skelmanthorpe Circular Trail

Starting-point: Skelmanthorpe Library/Council Offices

Walk along the main Commercial Road past the Co-op and turn left down Queen Street.

No.6 Queen Street houses the Skelmanthorpe Textile Heritage Museum – a small but fascinating private museum in an original weaver’s cottage, with visits by arrangement.

At the bottom of Queen Street turn right into Elm Street and then straight ahead onto Pilling Lane, which eventually becomes a broad track.

“Pilling” means the removal of bark for leather-work and it is thought there may have been a tannery in this vicinity. You will eventually see the Kirklees Light Railway on your left, with Cuckoo Nest Halt nearby.

Continue down Pilling Lane, which eventually becomes a metalled road serving houses. At the end of the houses follow the footpath straight ahead along the edge of a recreation ground which leads to a farm track. Turn right here and follow the track to the main A636 Wakefield Road.

Wakefield Road was originally a turnpike road with tolls at Park Mill, Bar Houses at Highbridge Lane Scissett and Catch Bar west of Denby Dale.

Turn right, cross the main road at Scissett Baths with care, continue briefly to the right before taking the narrow footpath to the left which crosses the River Dearne.

Here you are on part of the Dearne Way, a 30-mile route following the course of the river from its source west of Birdsedge to its confluence with the River Don at Mexborough. The Dearne Way has a distinctive miner’s lamp waymarker.

The path leads up to the road. Turn right and then first left onto Lower Common Lane. Follow the length of Lower Common Lane to the road junction. Here take the track straight ahead of you to follow the woodland edge down to a pond. Bear slightly right and then cross into the golf course, a relatively recent creation in the parkland of Bagden Hall.

Bagden Hall was built by George Norton of Cuttlehurst Mills in the 1830s. His brother Joseph built an identical mansion, Nortonthorpe Hall (now demolished) on the other side of the Dearne. Their great houses reflected the wealth derived from mills developed along the river with water-powered machines producing yarns to supply local weavers. Bagden Hall is now a hotel and restaurant.

Follow the waymarked path across the golf course and out by way of a metal kissing-gate into a lane. Walk straight ahead along the lane to a small group of houses. Turn right through another metal kissing-gate and follow the field path to another. Here turn down to the right past a pond towards Lower Clough House. Follow the tarmac drive down and across the River Dearne once more, then immediately left and up the short grassy bank to Wakefield Road.

Cross the road with care, bear briefly right and very shortly take the bridle path to the left up to Hen Perch Farm. Bear left and cross stiles to a green lane between woodland and the screen bank to Hen Perch clay quarry. You are on the Kirklees Way, a 72 mile circular walk around Kirklees, which our route follows for the next three miles or so. Cross out of the green lane and turn right onto an ancient stone-flagged path. This atmospheric path descends to cross Thorpe Dike then climbs to the Cross Lane recreation ground, Skelmanthorpe.

You have now completed approximately half of the full route. To return to the starting-point walk down Smithy Lane and turn left along Commercial Road back to the Council Offices.

At the end of the lane is the Foresters public house.

Continue straight ahead onto Cumberworth Lane and, at the end of the cricket field, turn right into the field and walk past the front of the pavilion.

The earthwork behind the pavilion (“Cumberworth Steppes”, by Abigail Downer) is one of the Kirklees Way artworks. It also marks the route of the Penistone Line railway, here in tunnel far below.

Leave by the timber stile to cross fields and further stiles to where the railway emerges from tunnel into cutting. Here, bear left across fields to climb gently through a small area of woodland. Cross a further field, then left over a stile to walk along the field edge past the recently
