Hi William,

Given the location of the site, I feel the bays to the rear of the site would cover our minimum requirement for off-street parking provision. That said, I believe the front bays are accessible by a regular-sized car without crossing the red line boundary; there is approximately 2.3m of clearance even taking into account the chimney stack.

Given the above, the scheme is acceptable from a highways point of view.

Kind Regards,

Jamie

Hi Jamie,

These are the latest swept paths. One parking space has been deleted. I think the number is more than adequate for a site with good public transport, but I would like your reassurance that the swept paths are okay.
