I live near by to the proposed application, and think the planning intent is perfectly acceptable. Parking to the rear in the application will relieve Dunford Road and is a sensible proposal. The lane provides legitimate access to the land at the back. The tree cutting has been done showing the site is plenty big enough for the modest new building. Most of the trees had self seeded due the land being neglected for perhaps thirty years, it was not woodland in the general understanding. Any wildlife will move onto the proper older woodland only feet away. Cutting the trees down has made it better along the foot path, no more leaves to slip on. The area will be much smarter when the project is finished, so I welcome the application looking at the long term, and not complaining about the short term mess.
