This is in reply to all the objections I would like to thank you for your comment and just wish you had talked to me as we were erecting our project. I believe most of the objections here are written by the same person because they all sound very similar, I will emphasise this is what I believe and I am entitled to my own view. In response to objection number 90623. I really should not have to defend myself as you are very missguided. We inherited our first cat abandoned and alone in Marsden and took her in as she was not wanted full of fleas and not very well. As she got better she needed a playmate, We took the responsible route and adopted from the brilliant Huddersfield Feral and Strays a little boy. The girl has been spayed and the boy neutered. Since then we have given a home to two more kittens from Huddersfield feral and strays. Millie the girl has gone through the normal routine of neutering and injections. However Freddie has had to have life threatening surgery to his ear which we have took on and he at the same time has been neutered. We care for our little furr babies and they are pets and not for sale. Please enlighten me as to how neutered and spayed cats can procreate as I would like to let the vet know. We are just trying to keep our family safe especially from vehicles using the pathway next to our house as a road. I will take legal advice about your comment because I think it should not be here. Thank you all for your comments
