This building is a piece of living history, was instrumental in the story of the Luddites, and Industrial Revolution, and under no circumstances should it be demolished. It was one of the very first things I remember hearing in history classes and to have such an incredible link to the past on the doorstep was, and is, amazing. It is a treasure, to be conserved and used to help future generations identify with important history. The building is doubly valuable in that it continues to serve the community, combining historic icon status, and tourism interest, with a modern function. I object to the potential demolition of this period gem in the strongest terms possible.
