Having grown up in Liversedge in the late and early 80s I was educated in the great history of this building, it's long standing history with the Luddites makes it it my eyes something that can be saved, I had my first little Saturday job here at the age of 15 cutting the grass, cleaning the play area and and general little jobs that need doing along the way, my uncle worked in there as a pot man for many years and my mother and stepfather were regular drinkers in there. It is such a shame that plans are being made to take this place of significant historic interest away, it needs to be preserved in some form or we are likely to loose yet more of our constituency's history. This is one of the lasting pieces of the Luddites and it would be a great shame to loose it because of pure greed from the owner who clearly just wants to make a profit by building houses on the site
