I previously objected to the original plan to demolish The Shears Inn. I cannot see any new evidence to support it's demolition now. The Shears is regarded in this area as a historical building, whether the building inside has been changed over time is irrelevant. This building was where the Luddites met, it will be connected with them in the Spen Valley history always. Just because the Spen Valley Civic Society commissioned a statue and created Sparrow Park in their memory, shows how people regard the history of the Luddites, it does not mean you can demolish The Shears Inn and use Sparrow Park as a memory of The Shears Inn. Should English Heritage choose to demolish Stonehenge, then tell people to read their leaflet instead or go look at a Memorial Park all about it defies comprehension. I once more object to the demolition of The Shears Public house.
