If the council has any claim to be interested in conservation then the response to this application is a no brainer! Whereas it has been patently obvious from the start that the owner of the pub had "other plans" his determination to seek demolition of the pub is indeed shameless. Why cannot he be satisfied with 2 houses in the carpark and a sympathetic conversion of the pub into a dwelling. Sad to lose the historic hostelry but at least the building would be saved. The suggestion that nearby references to the historic significance of the pub are sufficient is laughable. Using same logic you could demolish ANY building...York Minster perhaps as long as you stuck a plaque on a nearby wall!
