This addition will have no effect of the character of the area or on noise or disturbance of the area, in fact it looks better now that the area has been cleared. It's lovely to see the old water tower again. Having seen the plans, they are in-keeping with the previously agreed plans and won't have any impact on neighbours living conditions, our privacy or the environment, they have obviously taken all these points into consideration in the planning. Apart from the obvious improvement to the land, the builders aren't making a lot of noise and they are courteous and considerate, so I can't see the addition having an effect on those of us living next to the property whilst it is being constructed or even after. My windows look out directly onto the property and I don't think the addition will alter my viewS. The addition is clearly not going to impact on traffic or highway safety and there are no trees on the land to consider. I think the landscape will be improved. I don't have knowledge of policies or legislation to comment on those points. I think it's all going to look fantastic when it's done
