Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing as the co-owner

offering various treatments, many of which require a calm and peaceful ambience.

We welcome the above proposal and will be pleased when the current eyesore is no more. However, we do have concerns.

I was passed the new owners details by a certain councillor who assured me that they were very approachable, especially when compared to the previous owner.
I sent them an email expressing our concerns regarding noise pollution, but alas it wasn't acknowledged. This represents a worry.

We understand that any development is going to be noisy, however there are many, many ways to reduce the levels of noise pollution. We ask that all state of the art methods are studied and implemented in order to combat noise. If this entails also constructing something within our grounds, we are more than happy too allow entry in order to assist.

You need to realise that unless noise is controlled we will not be able to work efficiently. Consequently we would lose clients which could lead to the closure of our business.

I repeat, we look forward to the development commencing, but not at the cost of our business. We therefore ask you and the developers to liaise and work with us and to not ignore our plea. We hope everything runs smoothly and would hate to have to be a spanner in the works.

sincerely,
