Highly populated in the area, more houses means more people, more cars creating more pollution due to large amounts of traffic accumulation in a busy town already. wildlife within the area will overtime be extinct due to destroyed habitats and a build up of Both noise and air pollution contributing to global warming effecting not only the area but the country and the world! The country/agricultural land will decrease resulting in a decrease in foods supplied to local supermarkets but with a larger demand. How are we going to feed the town with no land to farm the crop? Bread, milk, eggs and other daily generally resources are all farmed for local supermarkets, without this, there will be an effect on jobs and the economy causing a recession! Farmers within the area, farmer all their life, their livelihood gone for No good reason! Other land owners, such as equestrians, rely on farmers all year round to create quality hay from local land to feed their horse all year round, not only is the wildlife going to be decreased, but other larger animals like horses, and cows will degrade due to the lack of farming undergoing. Think of the pandemic we are currently in, more people results in a higher risk of infection to other people within the community, more people to control. Crimes within the area are currently quite high, increasing the population will only increase the crimes, creating a bad outlook on the area-getting a bad name, hence effecting the housing prices and other factors. There will no longer be any privacy for current home owners who enjoy the half rural/half urban lifestyle, destroying this will only force people to move out of the area.
