Dogloitch wood is the home for many of our declining nature breeds, including the wren and kingfisher. The close proximity of this development will bring many more disturbances, and destruction to this habitat area on which these breeds depend for survival. This wood and surrounding fields should not be used for development, given the many other brown field sites in the Kirklees area, together with the already-limited provision for schools and healthcare in the area. Many people will move out of the area because of this, the area has been a valuable source of peace and recreation during lockdown.
