To whom it may concern

With reference the planning application for 10 Chancel court. I feel the front extension is not within keeping of the existing properties and will be the only one in the row with a porch, it will change the scene of the street being in the middle of a terrace.

The rear extension, the materials aren't in keeping with the property and will make it look different.

The drawings don't show the elevation and that the gardens are on 2 levels...

Will the ground works for the extension affect the gardens of the adjoining properties, that have adjoining dry stone wall's?

Will it have an effect on the retaining wall to the church?

The extension will also block out some natural light entering our kitchen and bedroom.

There is a drainage man hole cover to the rear of my property that borders number 10, will this extension be built over a public drain?
