I wish to object to this application. Fullwood Drive does not have the infrastructure to support another 10 dwellings; particularly houses of this size. The road is narrow and already difficult to navigate with the number of cars and cars parked. The increased traffic in and out of this narrow road will present a danger. There is constant water on the road from underground springs creating a danger in the winter which will only be made worse by more building work. The local schools/doctors and services are unable to support more people. And the roads around the suggested development are already overwhelmed. More disturbingly this is an application in a conservation area and is not in keeping. More habitats of flora and fauna not only would be destroyed, but already have been by the developers who have already driven diggers onto the land, erected Harris fencing and been back to chop down all the trees. Is this how planning applications work? The application means nothing and the developer goes ahead anyway?
