The area is deemed a 'conservation area' for a reason. It is to conserve the character of the are and its historic interest. This can't be done by adding loads of new houses. I can imagine 'Clay Well' and 'Brook Lane,' sandwiching the site are so called because of the water in these areas. We are already finding excess water pouring into our garden and haven't got a solution to this problem. It has arisen since the building work in the adjoining field. Building more houses will cause us more problems. There are now fewer birds and fewer deer. More building is going to mean a further decrease.
