I understand that the erection of ten affordable dwellings in a disused quarry known as the Chippings is a brown field site in a designated green belt area. The houses proposed are low budget and built to high eco standards. They will be cheaper than standard houses to heat since they are extremely energy efficient. This is significant given the fuel crisis and the low level of efficiency in local housing stock. The development is small, will blend well with the local community and is on a site that is currently under used. It will be a beacon of good eco practice and will be widely acclaimed. I think the initiative is commendable and I fully support it.
