I am really pleased to see an application of this nature here in the Holme Valley. There is a real lack of affordable homes and the fact that there is an eco element as well is an added advantage. Young people are having to leave the valley as they can't afford to buy houses here - we must find a way to encourage people to stay in the area and this is one way of doing that. I know there are some objections from local residents, but we have insufficient space for this type of development and we can't rely on mainstream developers to build the properties needed. They snap up all the best development land, so we should be encouraging developments of this kind, even if it isn't in a perfect location for some.
