I have lived in scholes for over 10 years, its a small beautiful country village. I live up from the apposed planning area on Chapelgate. I am against the idea of 10 new dwellings on the old quarry site. The first reason is that families including my grandchildren play and walk around the quarry and surrounding area. Its used by families on a daily basis. The quarry site has thrived over the years with natural plants and wildlife living there, including rabbits/hares, birds, bees etc. Building on the plot will damage and destroy the beautiful nature that has blossomed there. Animals will be killed and left with no habitat. I believe if anything is to be done with it, it should be turned in to a natural park for families to enjoy and no animals or nature destroyed. The other main point is the position of the quarry to the road and junction. The entrance is on a deadly blind corner and its a hugh hazard already with out adding to the problem. There is no foot paths surrounding the area either. The amount of machines and building vehicles that will be in and out of the area if it was to be approved would be absolutely chaotic. The road it self will become so dangerous. Noise pollution for months disturbing the farms and animals around. It will bring chaos and bring disruption to our beautiful country village.
