I have read today that the levelling up and Regeneration Bill will be changed to abolish house building targets. Instead targets for new homes will now become just a starting point. As a result local councils will be able to decide (with the intimate knowledge of the area they possess and govern) that they can build fewer houses if they face genuine constraints or if a large building development would significantly change the area's character. As documented many many times previously this planned development of 68 homes makes more than a significant change to the local area, it absolutely transforms it.. And not for the better! It is clear that the pressure the council has constantly referred to that was being applied from government to local councils to approve and build, however unsuitable or contentious has now gone. In the light of this update it is clear that the constraints and difficulties the council have had and still face moving forward with the massive change this building plan would have to the Lepton and Fenay Bridge locality that the decision must be to deny any approval of this plan for 68 houses.
