As many others have stated I am wondering why there wasn't any notification of the comments being opened back up. Given that the new supporting evidence is largely false it would be only fair to allow time for people to comment or at least let them know in good time. Obviously if any planning is passed and subsequently it can be shown that there were false statements then the planning will be revoked, so it is in everyone's interest that the comment period is extended.
