The roads currently cannot cope with amount if cars down here. Every inch of road has a car parked on it, adding yellow lines will only make this worse. You claim that the new houses will have dedicated parking, driveways etc. But what about existing? Then there is the drainage, this area is known to flood, Radulf Gardens gets exceptional amount of flooding and to add even more to that. Also the greenway wont be as green if you are taking away the adjoining fields, will that meet the councils green targets, very much doubt it. Pretty sure there is a mine shaft under that field too, wont be great for the people living there when the house collapses into the ground whenever the ground gets a little softer...
