I believe they have dogs living there so I assume this is why they have erected this fence to keep the dogs contained. If one is an XL Bully like someone else has commented on then with the ban coming into place the government have stipulated XL Bully owners have to have a 6 foot enclosed fence to keep the dogs in. So if the ban is enforced and this is one of the requirements they have to abide by to keep their dogs in their possession and from being put down then I believe they are responsible dog owners and have put the fence up to protect their pets. From what I remember the garden is tiered, therefore if the fence was to be lowered then the large dog that lives there would be able to jump over so imagine they have put the fence to this height to protect the public too. A good lick of paint wouldn't go a miss but apart from that I understand why the new owners have erected a fence of this size.
