Stocksmoor is a small quiet village and should be kept that way. 50 homes is too excessive in number, as it will spoil the rural feel of the edge of the village. There is no infrastructure to support this many new homes in this village. New homes should be built on brownfield sites, or places where derelict buildings exist and not on fresh green countryside. This is Greenbelt land. This means it is a protected site. Greenbelt should mean Greenbelt and not 'an easy site to develop'. The local villages are already at capacity in terms of traffic, parking, congestion, dentists, doctors and schools- particularly Kirkburton which is where most of the residents would have to rely on for amenities. Come on please re think this and not develop this site.
