We moved to Marsden 2 years ago from London and one of the things that brought us to this village (along with the great transport links) was the vibrant high street, especially the dining options. There are already a few establishments on the high street that are serving food and drink and are open late, but it would be fantastic to have more variety, especially of the quality of Cafe Oi. It seems odd that there is even an objection to having late opening times for a restaurant in the middle of a high street! There is a late night pub directly opposite, which will already be causing more noise than you'd expect from Cafe Oi. The whole village is in support of Cafe Oi being able to open late, which I have no doubt you'll see from the comments!
