Oi Dumplings are an absolute asset to the community. The owners are clearly passionate about what they do and have chosen to invest in larger premises in our village, producing high-quality, delicious food. This food is not mass-produced, poorly made and strong smelling fried takeaway food marketed at a late night post- pub market, but is a restaurant experience suited to families/couples eating out as a treat, with a price point to match. In this environment, alcohol is an expected part of this experience. Other nearby premises also open later and serve alcohol, so the expectation is that Oi would also offer this in order to compete and survive in tough economic conditions. It is difficult in these circumstances to see how an extended alcohol licence would result in particular noise disturbance and disruption. I have no doubt that the owners are responsible, aware and are fully committed to ensuring that they are a positive addition to the village rather than attracting any anti-social behaviour which would have a negative impact on their neighbours.
