Having lived in Marsden all my life, I have found that only recently is it a place that I would consider socialising in the evening in. I have in laws that visit every few months and previously we would have nipped to surrounding villages for food and drinks. Since the investment into better food establishments like the riverhead and peel street brewery I believe it has brought people into the village (including those who live here) in the evenings. The issues being having only a couple new places means less choice. Oi dumplings has always been a friendly environment with great food but in a smaller restricted place. Them having a larger place is great, allowing them to open later would be a great decision for the village and I feel they have moved to a place with less neighbours in comparison to where they previously were (next to swan inn with guest rooms and next to a GP and residential street).
