| I live locally and have frequented Marsden all my life. Like many other people I work and evenings are the only time I am likely to eat out. It is unacceptable that a place that was previously a diner anyway is now being refused evening hours. Especially when there are pubs and restaurants on the same street. Their food and service is vibrant and can only contribute to the local economy and culture. But they are far less likely to create any disturbance than the existing pubs and bars. We need to support local business and keep our villages alive and thriving and this establishment contributes to the knock-on effect that high quality food brings to all the other shops and businesses. People come back to Marsden again and again because its interesting. | |
