The updated drawings show the development in the main has been kept some distance away from the boundary which is great. The only area where this is not so is the south easterly corner where the sub station was originally positioned but houses have now taken the place of the sub station. It appears that there is considerable space to the north side of newly positioned sub station. Could this sub station be moved further north thus allowing water tank, access road and 4 houses facing Headlands Road to be moved north also. This would give more space at the south easterly corner which could allow for shrubs to be planted softening the appearance of the house gable end. This is my second comment my first comments are still applicable Thank you
