The Hanson's have gone above and beyond to build a garden room which blends in perfectly with the character of the surroundings. They have clearly thought carefully about the the design to ensure that there is only a positive impact on the environment, visually and also in making provision for solar and biomass to heat and light the building. Equally they have considered their neighbours - the building has no negative impact, somewhat ironic therefore that the Hanson's neighbours need no planning for their 'garden rooms' - huge terrible shipping containers that 'get around' planning law but pollute the character of the area. Is this really the alternative that the council planning department would prefer? I urge you to to decide in favour of this development; it presents no problem to anyone and the addition of more than thirty trees and to the area are a great benefit to wildlife. Visit on an evening time and there are bats clearly visible flitting around in the twilight too. They family have done a beautiful job. This is a good development. It should be passed.
