I currently live in a house with my family in Phase 1, we have lived in the house for almost 5 years, the house build, the neighbours and the community feel is exceptional, we chose this development as we felt it would be a great move for our family, we weren't wrong. Our house is as good as we could've imagined in terms of the look, feel and space management but the developers. naturally we have gained a lot of friends on the estate including those in Phase 2, because of this we have seen that the whole development is built with the same feel as ours albeit some are different sizes and shapes. There is no doubt that our decision to move on to the estate was the right one and equally, the use of the land across the whole site has not only improved the area that was once a dumping ground more or less, but with the development now in place, has created a mini community consisting of a range of families of all ages and sizes that are very happy. Since we moved here we have had street parties for national events and house parties for private events all with in the company of other home owners that live on the development (a lot of which we didn't know previously). In summary, I support the building of each and every one of the houses on the whole development, lets be honest, these houses are the best looking new houses in this and surrounding villages.
