From the moment Jacqui opened the Little Lock it has transformed a once empty building into a lovely dog friendly cafe which had become a fine addition to the Marsden community. We have become firm friends with many neighbours who we met in there and indeed people who live directly opposite. I was therefore surprised to see some comments regarding parking and noise placed on here, as those directly opposite have never expressed any concerns. The only time we've experienced any parking problems or excess noise is when the band practices in the Bandroom but once again they are another valuable addition to our community so certainly wouldn't want to see them stopped either. Economically surely we should also be encouraging local businesses who employ local people and again bring prosperity to the area. Myself and my wife introduced to the place and he has been made to feel so very welcomed. He has a brain injury and has problems with his memory, and once this was explained to the staff they have gone out of their way to keep an eye on him so much so that he now feels confident to go in on his own. That's a huge positive for somebody who otherwise may just sit in his home all day. This is just one example of the unseen benefits somewhere like the Little Lock brings to people and the community. I look forward to calling in with my dog Bobby, oh and my wife to see Jacqui and the team in the Little Lock!
