This looks pretty grim. Tiny apartments with not enough room to swing the proverbial ... Come on Kirklees Council. You surely can do better than this. Other towns faced with the fundamental change and decline of the retail sector are recognising that they need to repurpose the town centre as a place for people to live. All categories of people - single people, couples, families. Do that and over time the town centre will revive. But in Kirklees our council thinks that re-populating the town centre means reduplicating office blocks as student accommodation and now as old people's flats. How can such a policy contribute to revitalising the town centre? This application is proposing tiny flats with very limited space. The only people who would opt to live in such conditions are penniless and desperate. Their quality of life would be very poor. The application should be rejected. We want decent quality housing in the town centre.
