We strongly object to this development, which from past experience at other fire stations has resulted in problems for our crews turning out to incidents. Mirfield is an on-call fire station which means firefighters attend the premises in response to incidents and therefore at times it appears unoccupied and I am concerned that this may encourage parking along the forecourt and on the highway. I note the applicant's comments to address the highway issues, and the fact that visitors are only there briefly collecting pizzas and that there is parking further along the street (having double yellow lines outside the proposal), however the likelihood is that customers who are simply calling in to the takeaway for a few minutes will believe it is acceptable to park on the adjacent car park at the front of our bay. This is a huge risk for our ability to exit rapidly and safely. Additionally once firefighters are called, park their own vehicles and turn out to an incident, there is a possibility that they will block in any vehicles that may be parked as they cannot wait for those drivers to return. Depending on the type of incident it may be a considerable time before they return to station.
