i have lived in this area for 60 years and seen many changes. i also lived on norwood drive for 20 years and used the public footpath twice a day to get to and from birstall to use public transport.i noe use this public footpath to visit my parents everyday on foot. it has never been used for fly tipping it is a well used shortcut for people going to birstall, parents dropping children at local schools.etc etc sometimes the shrubbery may be a little overgrown but it has never been a problem. the problem is a resident who decides to extend his garden right up to the footpath without any consideration for any one else. besides looking unsightly it is what i would consider a very selfish act which has no benefit for anyone else what so ever apart from the property owner. it was never waste land
