I fully support the regeneration and redevelopment of The George Hotel as a key part of Huddersfield town centre's economy, heritage, culture and tourism offer. I accept that in order to function properly as a 21st century hotel, changes are necessary. Striking modern extensions can enhance original buildings eg Lyons Opera House, Reichstag Berlin. The overall shape of the proposed design makes a coherent whole, and the brand new far end of the John William Street elevation echoes the original hotel with its three "columns" of fenestration. However, the new windows appear to be two storeys high. To connect the old and new visually it would be better if the horizontal panels in the windows were stone or replaced with material that matches the stone, creating the effect of four storeys.
