On the original and updated plans the windows at the rear of the building are shown as 3 windows, however recently this has been altered to a doorway/2 windows onto a flat roof. What concerns us is that if this is to become a fire exit that the roof it goes onto might not be structurally sound for people to walk on and at the moment there is no way to get to ground level. If a staircase is installed to ground level it is into a small space to where there is already a fire exit from another room, and accessibility is limited. If it's not going to be a fire exit but somewhere people working there can go and sit outside, then they are able to look straight into the neighbouring houses and we would have no privacy in our gardens or living rooms. I have photos if any are required to substantiate this. The new plans for ground level windows at the back of the building will be looking straight into people's gardens and living rooms and again privacy is an issue.
