Closing Huddersfield Town Market would be a big mistake. The market is an important part of the town. It helps local people make a living, gives shoppers a place to find fresh and affordable goods, and brings the community together. Many small businesses depend on the market to survive. If it closes, they could lose their income, and the town could lose jobs. People who live nearby, especially older people or those without cars, will also lose an easy and affordable place to shop. The market also adds life and character to the town centre. Without it, Huddersfield could lose part of what makes it special.
