There is a road sign by the junction of Penistone Road and Marsh Lane that reads 'Shepley Village' and points the traveller towards what he or she would expect to be a small, rural settlement. And yet there is a huge 'development' (I use inverted commas there as the word suggests progress whereas I believe that these particular activities are quite the opposite) taking place adjacent to the A629. There is also currently a large house building site to the north of Fenay Beck and another on Marsh Lane. These three sites are all within the village of Shepley. Do we really require yet another housing estate?! How much longer before the word 'Village' needs to be expunged from that road sign?
