

I am in full support of this development which will bring much more needed homes into the community.

We live in a generation where our local villages are more populated with the elderly community, pushing out younger locals who have been brought up in these villages because of the obscene house prices.

Whilst I understand the older generation do not like change, especially if they have lived in this village for a substantial amount of their life. However, we need to start making more available housing for younger families and the next generations to come regardless. The houses that Vivly have built in Shepley look great, well made and very modern. They bring a fresh look to Shepley and look even better now they are being lived in. I much prefer this to the Newitt homes in Fenay Bridge which have shot up in a finger click.

I think this would be a good location for the build and would definitely be interested in purchasing one for me and my family.

We live in an area where there is not much, if any, brown belt. We must start making sensible decisions now to keep the younger generations and first time buyers in the area before the housing prices get ridiculous.

Certain residents of this village will not be happy with any development of any kind - take for example the erection of an agricultural barn on the farmers own field which has received backlash for "ruining views". If you can't even build something to help with farming then what can you do in this village?? It's getting silly. I strongly believe it is up to the landowners to make these choices and have support from the council to do it in the safest and most effective way.

The younger generations are the ones who will be supporting this village for many years to come, its time to listen to them and what they want.

Thank you.
