No mention of the deer that frequent the woods adjoining the field. How very strange that what was an unmade footpath adjoining the field has in the last couple of months been cleared of vegetation and a hard surface has been laid. Said footpath leads to "gas works" adjacent to the main road and the field. The footpath now resembles an access road and signage has appeared for pedestrians to look both ways. I strongly object to this development but considering the said mentioned works the decision has already made. Another example of ruining the green belt when there are many more brown field sites that can be developed.
