The land where the houses would be built isn't suitable for the proposed plans. The height of the properties raises concerns, as they will impact natural light reaching other properties as well as impacting privacy for neighbouring properties. Such as the bungalow right next to it, which would lose a lot of natural light. It may also impact neighbouring houses' views, which could impact property values. The homes would contribute to obstructing visibility of chapel hill when going up that part of victoria street and vice versa. Which will cause problems, eventually an accident. The part of victoria street where the houses would be built is often where there's hazardous parking. Building two more houses only adds to that problem. It's just not suitable land to build a house on. Especially two that are three story.
