Huddersfield civic society would like to object to this particular design of the newly proposed BT street hubs. We both understand and fully support the need to progress from the current outdated phone kiosks as well as providing the public with modern communication options such as emergency phone and public Wifi. However the need for 75 inch high advertisement screens creates unnecessary clutter within town centre conservation areas, particularly in Huddersfield where we are progressing to a more green and pleasant surrounding through the “Cultural Heart” build programme. Even outside the Conservation areas, they are unsightly, and allow for driver distraction. Surely its possible to provide both Wifi and emergency phones without these ugly additions.
