Hi James,

I appreciate that the consultation period has now closed, however I have noticed a further discrepancy in the amended plans which I was only able to identify because the latest plans were uploaded on the final day of consultation.

The site plan continues to identify the access as 700mm, whereas the subsequent amended drawings appear to show an increased width of 800mm/900mm. This is in addition to the discrepancies I have already raised regarding the existing gate, steps and recessed landing.

Given that the amended plans were uploaded on the final consultation day, I would be grateful if this could be brought to the case officer's attention and considered before the application is determined.

In particular, could you please confirm which plan/measurement is being relied upon when assessing the proposed access?

Many thanks,
