This building is an integral part of Kirklees History, while I understand that previous owners have neglected to own that history it never the less exists. You are currently looking at Red house to ensure it's continuing historical value and the Shears Inn is very much a part of the same story. The setting up of a Luddite way is completely irrelevant to the conservation choices regarding this property. I hope as planners and our councillors making these decisions have a knowledge of and a true regard for the value of our history which in itself is a draw to tourists and revenue. The Spen Valley has a unique history connected to the Bronte Sisters and Haworth and is very much a part of the whole Yorkshire tourist attraction if only you would look at the whole we could be so much more than Tour de Yorkshire and Kirklees could benefit to a much greater extent from tourism and its revenues.
